INTRODUCTION

Defendant Ramesh Balwani's motion to sever is premature and unsupported, and should be denied. "Co-defendants jointly charged are, prima facie, to be jointly tried." United States v. Doe, 655 F.2d 920, 926 (9th Cir. 1980). This is particularly true in conspiracy cases. A defendant seeking severance "must demonstrate that a joint trial is so manifestly prejudicial that it outweighs the dominant concern with judicial economy and compels the exercise of the court's discretion to sever." Id. at 926 (quotation omitted).

Balwani's motion is based on the false premise the Court will admit expert and other evidence that Holmes suffered from mental conditions caused by his alleged abuse. Based on the limited record, the Court should not do so.

Nor does the evidence support Dr. Mechanic's conclusions that Balwani controlled, manipulated, and abused Holmes.

The Court should not decide to sever the trial based on this record. To the extent the Court has questions regarding Dr. Mechanic's potential testimony, the government requests the Court set a Daubert hearing.

Even assuming arguendo that some portion of Dr. Mechanic's testimony were admitted after a Daubert hearing, Balwani fails to show this will manifestly prejudice him. The Court may elect to limit portions of Dr. Mechanic's testimony because of Rule 403 considerations. And this Court's "careful and frequent limiting instructions to the jury, explaining how and against whom certain evidence may be considered, can reduce or eliminate any possibility of prejudice arising from a joint trial." United States v. Fernandez, 388 F.3d 1199, 1243 (9th Cir. 2004).

Balwani's additional arguments for severance fail. A desire not to investigate a co-defendant's allegation is not a cognizable basis for severance. Balwani also has not shown that Holmes's defense is "so irreconcilable with the core of his own defense that the acceptance of the codefendant's theory by the jury precludes acquittal of the defendant," United States v. Throckmorton, 87 F.3d 1069, 1072 (9th Cir. 1996), or that his confrontation rights will be compromised.

Even if Balwani could show the manifest prejudice required, he ignores an appropriate remedy short of severance: empaneling dual juries, a practice which is widely used and accepted in the Ninth Circuit. Lambright v. Stewart, 191 F.3d 1181, 1185 (9th Cir. 1999) (en banc).

Finally, if the Court is inclined to grant severance, the Court should try Holmes first. Balwani has failed to show that this would prejudice him. His claim that Holmes's defense will incurably taint the jury pool (and thus he must go first) is not supported by the record. He makes no showing that current publicity is so pervasive and negative that the Court will be unable to select a fair and impartial jury in this large, metropolitan venue, or that Holmes's allegations would significantly alter that reality. Even if he could, the remedy is voir dire and, if necessary, a change of venue, not censorship. Holmes is the lead defendant in this case and the face of Theranos. The victims, the public, and the interests of justice would be disserved by an indefinite delay in resolving her guilt or innocence.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND AND RELEVANT FACTS

I. Holmes's Potential Rule 12.2(b) Defense Prompts Balwani's Severance Motion

On September 18, 2019, Holmes's counsel advised counsel Balwani's counsel that she would introduce testimony about the "psychological, emotional, and [REDACTED] she "suffered . . . at the hands of Mr. Balwani." (See Dec. 3, 2019, Decl. of Jeffrey Coopersmith, Exh. A.) In the letter, Holmes's counsel suggested the main argument in favor of severance for Balwani: "because your client has a Sixth Amendment right to a trial in front of a jury free from bias that arises from issues that do not directly relate to his guilt or innocence of the offenses alleged." (Id. (emphasis in original).)¹

¹ From the context, it is apparent that the Defendants' coordination was part of a joint strategy to obtain severance. Severance would, of course, serve strategic ends for both: Holmes would have the benefit of previewing the government's entire case-in-chief and having trial transcripts for all the government witnesses should her case proceed second. Balwani would have the strategic benefit of not being tried with the number one defendant in the case—the founder and public face of the company—should he proceed to trial first.

1 Relying entirely on this letter, Balwani moved to sever on December 3, 2019. His first—and 2 main—argument was exactly the one advanced by Holmes’s counsel: “a joint trial would prevent the 3 jury from making a reliable judgment about [his] guilt or innocence.” (Balwani Mot. to Sever at 7–8
4 (internal quotations omitted).)

5 II. Holmes’s Severance Motion and Rule 12.2(b) Notice

6 On December 16, 2019, Holmes moved to sever, asserting that she would be unable to 7 participate and present her defense due to the “likely physical, psychological, and emotional effects” of 8 being in Balwani’s presence during trial, and submitting the unsworn declaration of her expert Dr.
9 Mindy B. Mechanic. (Holmes Mot. to Sever at 4.) She also filed notice under Rule 12.2(b), stating that 10 she “may introduce expert evidence at trial related to a mental condition bearing on guilt.”

11 In her unsworn declaration, Dr. Mechanic stated that her opinions were based on approximately 12 14 hours of in-person interviews and psychological testing with Holmes, conducted at the law offices of 13 Williams and Connolly in Washington, D.C., as well as interviews of approximately one to two hours
14 each with Holmes’s parents, also at Williams and Connolly, and an approximately 90-minute interview
15 with Holmes’s brother in San Francisco. (Mechanic Decl. at 3.)

It does not appear that Holmes provided any materials documenting prior mental health treatment or diagnoses to Dr. Mechanic. (See Mechanic Decl. at 3.)

Notably, Dr. Mechanic's declaration did not address the basis for a Rule 12.2(b) defense, nor did Dr. Mechanic opine that Holmes's prior experience of PTSD during the time of the offense would have negated her ability to form the requisite mens rea to commit wire fraud. (See generally Mechanic Decl.)

III. Court Orders Holmes to Supplement the Mechanic Declaration to Address Her Rule 12.2(b) Defense During January 13, 2020, Hearing

In its December 30, 2019, administrative motion, the government requested the Court set a schedule for the Rule 12.2 procedures and litigation that would permit the Court to rule on the severance motions after deciding the threshold issue of the admissibility of the Rule 12.2(b) defense and related testimony. During the January 13, 2020, hearing, the government alternatively urged the Court to order Holmes to provide additional support for her Rule 12.2(b) defense before making a final ruling on severance. (Transcript of Jan. 13, 2020, hearing ("Tr.") at 31–32, 37–38, 72–74.) The government noted that the severance motions assumed that the Rule 12.2(b) defense and Holmes's statements detailing her allegations against Balwani would be admitted at trial even though this was not a definite—or even probable—outcome. (Id. at 47–48.) The government further highlighted that Holmes had not yet submitted any statement from an expert opining that her mental condition at the time of the offense had any bearing on her guilt to commit the charged crime—a prerequisite to establishing the relevance of the allegations against Balwani. (Id. at 47.)

At the conclusion of the hearing, the Court ordered Holmes to supplement the Mechanic Declaration by adding "a page or two" to provide "some foundation[]" for the Rule 12.2(b) defense. (Id.

1 at 71.) The Court further granted leave to Balwani to supplement his motion to sever to address this
2 amended declaration from Dr. Mechanic. (Id. at 50–51, 65.)

3 IV. Holmes’s Amended Mechanic Declaration and Supplemental Rule 12.2(b) Notice

4 On January 17, 2020, Holmes filed an amended and sworn declaration of Dr. Mechanic. This 5 amended declaration provided scant support for her Rule 12.2(b) defense. In her Notice of Submission
6 to the Court, Holmes highlighted the one paragraph Dr. Mechanic added to address the Rule 12.2(b)
7 defense: the last paragraph of Section XIV on page 11. This paragraph, however, does not address
8 Holmes’s mental state or how her mental conditions affected her mens rea at the time of the offense.
9 Instead, the paragraph provides general conclusions about how “abusers assume a rein of control over 10 their victims” and how victims of IPV “are likely to defer to the opinions of the abuser.” (Amended
11 Mechanic Decl. at 11.)

12 At the request of the government, Holmes also provided additional notice of her Rule 12.2(b)
13 defense. (Baehr-Jones Decl., Exh. 2.) Specifically, in a January 17, 2020, letter, Holmes listed Dr.
14 Mechanic as the expert she had engaged for purposes of her Rule 12.2(b) notice. (Id.) The letter further 15 stated that the Rule 12.2(b) forensic evaluation of Holmes “has consisted or will consist of semi-16 structured and structured interviews,” as well as the “MMPI-2 test.” (Id.)

17 V. Dr. Renee Binder’s Declaration

18 The government has retained Dr. Renee Binder to opine on Holmes’s noticed Rule 12.2(b)
19 defense. [REDACTED]

ARGUMENT

I. Legal Standard for Severance

The general rule is that defendants jointly charged are jointly tried. See United States v. Gay, 567 F.2d 916, 919 (9th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 999 (1978). This rule applies particularly in conspiracy cases such as this. United States v. Escalante, 637 F.2d 1197, 1201 (9th Cir. 1980); see also Fernandez, 388 F.3d at 1242 (noting that “a joint trial is particularly appropriate where the co-defendants are charged with conspiracy”). Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 14 provides that a district court, in its discretion, may grant a severance when it appears that a joint trial would prejudice a defendant. However, “[t]here is a preference in the federal system for joint trial of defendants who are indicted together.” Zafiro v. United States, 506 U.S. 534, 537 (1993). Severance is to be granted only if there is a “serious risk that a joint trial would compromise a specific trial right of [a properly joined defendant] or prevent the jury from making a reliable judgment about guilt or innocence.” Id. at 539. Because severance is disfavored, “defendants bear a heavy burden when attempting to obtain reversal of a district court’s denial of a motion to sever.” United States v. Johnson, 297 F.3d 845, 858 (9th Cir. 2002). “Such decisions will be reversed only when ‘the joint trial was so manifestly prejudicial as to require the trial judge to exercise his discretion [on the motion to sever] in just one way, by ordering a separate trial.’” Id. (quoting United States v. Hanley, 190 F.3d 1017, 1027 (9th Cir. 1999)).

II. Holmes Does Not Present a Viable Rule 12.2(b) Defense Requiring Severance

Balwani urges the Court to make a final decision on severance based on a potential defense of his co-defendant that is not viable. As set forth below, courts have permitted evidence to be admitted as part of a “mens rea” or Rule 12.2(b) defense in rare and narrowly defined circumstances. Contrary to

1 defense counsel's representation during the January 13, 2020, hearing, the "threshold for admitting such 2 evidence" is not "very low when the issue goes to mens rea." (Tr. at 29.) And it is not "likely" that this
 3 evidence will come in at trial. (Id. at 49.) Quite the opposite: Holmes has not, as part of Defendants'
 4 joint severance strategy, provided a basis for the admissibility of her Rule 12.2(b) defense. Holmes's
 5 own expert declaration provides no support for admitting this defense, nor does the evidence Holmes
 6 submitted to her expert—presumably, the best evidence she can find to support the defense.. In contrast,
 7 all the available evidence shows a defendant fully in command of her cognitive abilities and fully able to 8 understand the nature and consequences of her actions. There is simply no basis at this juncture for 9 admitting evidence in support of this defense.

10 Because Holmes's mens rea defense is not admissible, neither are her allegations against 11 Balwani. Absent expert testimony connecting these allegations to a mental disorder that tends to negate 12 Holmes's intent, the allegations are wholly irrelevant and should be excluded under Federal Rule of 13 Evidence 403. Severance is unnecessary.

14 A. The Limited Admissibility of Psychiatric Evidence to Negate *Mens Rea

15 A defendant's ability to present a "mens rea" defense derives from the Insanity Defense and 16 Reform Act (IDRA) of 1984. The Act established an "affirmative defense" when the defendant "as a 17 result of a severe mental disease or defect, was unable to appreciate the nature and quality or the 18 wrongfulness of his [or her] acts." 18 U.S.C. § 17(a). Congress limited the defense, however, stating 19 explicitly in the Act that a defendant's "[m]ental disease or defect does not otherwise constitute a 20 defense." Id. The statute placed the burden on the defendant to prove the defense "by clear and 21 convincing evidence." 18 U.S.C. § 17(b). Additionally, the burden "of showing that proffered
 22 testimony is offered to negate the mens rea element of a crime and not in support of some improper 23 defense theory falls squarely on the defendant." United States v. Baxt, 74 F. Supp. 2d 436, 441 (D.N.J.
 24 1999) (citing United States v. Williams, 95 F.3d 723, 729 (8th Cir. 1996)); see also Daubert v. Merrell 25 Dow Pharm., 43 F.3d 1311, 1316 (9th Cir. 1995) (on remand, holding that proponent of expert
 26 testimony must show that evidence is admissible under standards set forth in the Supreme Court's 27 decision); United States v. Starzecpyzel, 880 F. Supp. 1027, 1031 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (stating that the 28 proponent of expert evidence bears the burden of producing facts to establish admissibility).

As part of the same statute, Congress also enacted Federal Rule of Evidence 704(b), which prohibits experts from stating an opinion or inference as to the ultimate issue of whether a defendant did or did not have the mental state constituting an element of the charged crime. See United States v. Cohen, 510 F.3d 1114, 1125 (9th Cir. 2007) (“Even if expert testimony would ‘assist the trier of fact’ within the meaning of Rule 702, such testimony may be excluded under Rule 704(b) if the testimony ‘state[s] an opinion or inference as to whether the defendant did or did not have the mental state or condition constituting an element of the crime charged’”) (quoting Fed. R. Evid. 704(b)).

Courts have consistently cautioned that under the IDRA, the admission of mental defect evidence should be permitted only in rare and narrowly defined circumstances. As the Third Circuit observed in United States v. Pohlot:

Only in the rare case, however, will even a legally insane defendant actually lack the requisite mens rea purely because of mental defect [A] man who commits murder because he feels compelled by demons still possesses the mens rea required for murder. The government’s burden of proving mens rea is therefore considerably less onerous than its previous burden of proving sanity.

827 F.2d 889, 900 (3d Cir. 1987) cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1011 (1988), (citations omitted); United States v. Twine, 853 F.2d 676, 679 (9th Cir. 1988) (citing Pohlot and finding “a careful reading of the 1984 Act and its history persuades us that Congress intended to restrict a defendant’s ability to excuse guilt with mental defect evidence, curtailing the insanity defense”); see also United States v. Cameron, 907 F.2d 1051, 1066 (11th Cir. 1990) (only rarely will defendant be able to show lack of mens rea due to mental defect); United States v. Whitehead, 896 F.2d 432, 436 n.6 (9th Cir. 1990) (“Significantly, the 1984 Act limits the insanity defense to those mental disorders that are ‘severe.’”) (quoting S. Rep. No. 98–225, 98th Cong. 2d Sess. 229); United States v. Agnello, 158 F. Supp. 2d 285, 287 (E.D.N.Y. 2001) (where evidence of mental abnormality is offered in support of a legally unacceptable theory of lack of mens rea, it must be excluded); United States v. Mezvinsky, 206 F. Supp. 2d 661, 664 (E.D. Pa. 2002) (recognizing that the IDRA leaves only a “narrow ray of light” for the admission of psychiatric evidence to negate intent).

Accordingly, “Congress has instructed courts to be extremely cautious” when confronted with an effort to introduce psychiatric evidence to negate intent. United States v. Richards, 9 F. Supp. 2d 455, 457 (D.N.J. 1998); see also Pohlot, 827 F.2d at 905 (encouraging the careful examination of psychiatric testimony purportedly offered to negate intent because of the “strong danger of misuse” in this area); Mezvinsky, 206 F. Supp. 2d at 665 (same). Such caution is warranted because of the high likelihood that the introduction of such evidence—even if characterized as strictly relevant to negate intent—will result in the resurrection of precisely the kinds of defenses that the IDRA was enacted to prohibit. See, e.g., Cameron, 907 F.2d at 1066; Agnello, 158 F. Supp. 2d at 287; Richards, 9 F. Supp. 2d at 457. See also United States v. Schneider, 111 F.3d 197, 203 (1st Cir. 1997) (noting that psychiatric evidence offered to negate intent “tends to reintroduce the very concepts that Congress wanted to exclude and thereby to mislead the jury”); United States v. Boykoff, 186 F. Supp. 2d 347, 350 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (same).

B. Psychiatric Evidence Must Be Directly Linked to the Mens Rea at Issue in a Particular Case to Be Admissible

In light of the IDRA, a defendant may only present “psychiatric evidence which negates the mens rea element of a charged crime.” United States v. Wescott, 83 F.3d 1354, 1358 (11th Cir. 1996). Accordingly, in determining whether evidence of a psychiatric impairment is admissible for this purpose, courts have required the defendant to demonstrate clearly, in advance of trial, that there is a direct link between such evidence and the specific mens rea that the government must prove. Cameron, 907 F.2d at 1067; Boykoff, 186 F. Supp. 2d at 349 (recognizing that courts have “refused to admit mental disease evidence where no direct link could be established between it and the issue of mens rea”); United States v. Pirro, 76 F. Supp. 2d 478, 485 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (“Mental disease evidence is generally excluded where no link is demonstrated between the evidence and the defendant’s mens rea or where the defendant could not demonstrate that he actually lacked mens rea at the time of the offense because of any psychological defect.”); Baxt, 74 F. Supp. 2d at 440–41 (evidence of impaired judgment is not evidence of a lack of mens rea).

It is not enough for a defendant to show that her psychiatric condition adversely affected her state of mind during the relevant time. See, e.g., Mezvinsky, 206 F. Supp. 2d at 672–73; Richards, 9 F. Supp. 2d at 459 (in embezzlement case, court excluded evidence defendant was suffering from extreme case of Major Depression Disorder which substantially impaired his judgment because no link was established between that evidence and lack of mens rea). The defendant must instead show that because of a mental defect at the time she committed the crimes alleged, she did not have the requisite intent to

1 be found guilty. See, e.g., Agnello, 158 F. Supp. 2d at 287–88 (court excluded evidence defendant
2 suffered from bipolar disorder because defendant “failed to establish the necessary link or fit”).

3 Significantly, “[c]onclusory statements by a defendant[’s experts] about the link between 4 psychiatric evidence and the defendant’s mens rea at the time the alleged crime was committed do not
5 render the evidence admissible.” Baxt, 74 F. Supp. 2d at 440; see also United States v. Bennett, 161
6 F.3d 171, 181, 185 (3d Cir. 1998). Courts determining whether to admit such evidence have instead
7 insisted on a reasoned explanation, based on the relevant facts and sound scientific principles,
8 demonstrating that a defendant lacked the requisite intent to commit the alleged offenses at the time of 9 those offenses. “This burden of showing that proffered testimony is offered to negate the mens rea
10 element of a crime and not in support of some improper defense theory falls squarely on the defendant.”
11 Baxt, 74 F. Supp. 2d at 441 (citing United States v. Williams, 95 F.3d 723, 729 (8th Cir. 1996)).

12 In giving effect to the legislative judgments reflected in the IDRA, courts have relied on Rule
13 702 and the standards articulated by the Supreme Court in Daubert to exclude expert psychiatric 14 evidence that does not actually negate the particular form of mens rea that must be established in a given 15 case. As the court explained in United States v. Towns:

16 While the rules allow for expert testimony relating to mens rea under certain 17 circumstances, Daubert makes it clear that the proffered expert testimony must 18 have some valid scientific connection to the facts of the case in order to be helpful to the finder of fact, and therefore relevant.

19 19 F. Supp. 2d 67, 71 (W.D.N.Y. 1998) (internal citations omitted). Where expert psychiatric testimony
20 does not demonstrate a lack of mens rea at the relevant time, but instead serves only to explain or justify 21 a defendant’s conduct, courts have consistently excluded such evidence as failing to meet the 22 requirements of relevance and helpfulness under Rule 702 and Daubert. See Mezvinsky, 206 F. Supp. 2d 23 at 674; United States v. Pendergraft, 120 F. Supp. 2d 1339, 1344 (M.D. Fla. 2000); Boykoff, 186 F.
24 Supp. 2d at 349; United States v. Griffin, No. (S6) 94 CR. 631 (AGS), 1996 WL 140073, at *10–11
25 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 1996).

26 In United States v. Scholl, for example, the Ninth Circuit upheld limitations on expert testimony
27 under Rule 12.2(b) that did not explain how the disorder would undermine a defendant’s intentional
28 criminal conduct. 166 F.3d 964, 970 (9th Cir. 1999). There, the defendant, who was charged with filing

1 false tax returns, argued that the district court had erred in excluding under Rule 702 the testimony of an
 2 expert on compulsive gambling who would have testified that pathological gamblers, like the defendant,
 3 “have distortions in thinking and ‘denial,’ which impact their ability and emotional wherewithal to keep 4 records.” Id. The Ninth Circuit affirmed, noting that there was no evidence presented at the Daubert
 5 hearing that addicted gamblers were incapable of truthfully reporting their gambling income. Id.
 6 “[E]vidence that compulsive gamblers are in denial . . . would not tend to show that Scholl did not 7 believe his tax return to be correct.” Id. at 971.

8 Moreover, even where proffered psychiatric evidence has some relevance to the issue of mens
 9 rea, it may be excluded for failing the test of admissibility under Rule 403. As discussed above, the 10 courts have often recognized that the use of mental disease evidence to negate specific intent “tends to 11 reintroduce the very concepts that Congress wanted to exclude [in enacting the IDRA] and thereby to 12 mislead the jury.” Schneider, 111 F.3d at 203. Such evidence “presents an inherent danger that it will 13 distract the jury from focusing on the actual presence or absence of mens rea.” Cameron, 907 F.2d at 14 1067. As the court cautioned in Pohlot:

15 Psychiatrists are capable of supplying elastic descriptions of mental states that 16 appear to but do not truly negate the legal requirements of mens rea. Presenting 17 defense theories or psychiatric testimony to juries that do not truly negate mens rea
 18 may cause confusion about what the law requires.

19 827 F. 2d at 890. For these reasons, such evidence, even if relevant and helpful under Rules 401 and 20 702, is properly excluded under Rule 403 where its capacity to mislead and confuse the jury
 21 substantially outweighs whatever limited probative value it may have. See, e.g., Agnello, 158 F. Supp.
 22 2d at 289–90 (proffered testimony regarding defendant’s bipolar disorder could mislead the jury into 23 thinking such evidence excused the offense); Griffin, 1996 WL 140073, at *10 (“expert psychiatric 24 testimony regarding inherently malleable psychological testimony can be misused at trial to mislead or 25 confuse the jury”) (internal quotations omitted); United States v. Vinieris, 611 F. Supp. 1046, 1049
 26 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) (excluding proffered psychiatric testimony under Rules 403 and 702 “upon the ground
 27 that it would not assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue and that, 28 even if relevant, its probative value [was] substantially outweighed by the danger of confusion of the issues or of misleading the jury”).

C. There Is No Evidence Showing Holmes Had a Severe Mental Disease or Defect That Undermined Her Ability to Form the Intent to Commit Wire Fraud

Holmes has failed to meet the standard set forth above for admitting evidence in support of a mens rea defense. In this case, Holmes is charged with conspiracy to commit wire fraud and wire fraud. The mens rea for wire fraud is that Holmes acted with the “intent to defraud.” Ninth Cir. Model Crim. J. Instr. 8.124. This means that she must have acted “knowingly” and “with the intent to deceive or cheat.” Id. Therefore, to be admissible under Daubert and Pohl, Dr. Mechanic’s testimony must address Holmes’s psychological condition at the time of those schemes and how her mental condition then rendered her incapable of deceit. See Mezvinsky, 206 F. Supp. 2d at 668 (“Mezvinsky’s mens rea defense, therefore, must be probative as to whether he had the mental capacity to form such an intention over the twelve-year course of his alleged two dozen schemes to defraud.”).

1. Dr. Mechanic’s Amended Declaration Does Not Support a Rule 12.2(b) Defense

(Amended Mechanic Decl. at 14.) This is exactly the kind of opinion that courts have excluded for failing to address the mens rea for the offense. See, e.g., Mezvinsky, 206 F. Supp. 2d at 672–73 (“To be sure, [defendant’s] experts are prepared to testify at length that [his] [bipolar disorder] resulted in ‘poor judgment’ and ‘bad choices,’ but none is in a position to state that, at the relevant time, [he] did not have the capacity to deceive.”); Richards, 9 F. Supp. 2d at 459 (in embezzlement case, court excluded evidence defendant suffered extreme case of Major Depression Disorder which substantially impaired his judgment because no link was established between that evidence and supposed lack of mens rea).

 4 [REDACTED]
 5 [REDACTED] See United States v. Byers, 730 F.2d 568, 571 (9th Cir. 1984) (affirming 6 the exclusion of “ambiguous” psychiatric testimony that would not “have materially assisted a jury in 7 determining whether Byers committed a voluntary, intentional violation of known legal duty”).

8 [REDACTED]
 9 [REDACTED] expert opinions the Ninth Circuit has held probative and admissible to a mens rea defense.
 10 In United States v. Cohen, for instance, the Ninth Circuit held that the expert opinion directly connected 11 the defendant’s disorder with his ability to form the “willfulness” necessary to commit tax fraud—a 12 higher level of intent than required for wire fraud. 510 F.3d at 1123. There, the defense psychiatrist
 13 described Cohen as “irrational to the point of dysfunction,” and directly tied this condition to Cohen’s
 14 inability to have a criminal “will.” Id.; see also United States v. Sandoval-Mendoza, 472 F.3d 645 (9th 15 Cir. 2006) (both government and defense experts agreed that defendant suffered from an actual,
 16 unusually large pituitary tumor that compressed defendant’s frontal lobe, causing brain damage with 17 demonstrated impacts on his reasoning processes).

18 [REDACTED] those excluded by the district court in 19 United States v. Cruz-Ramirez, No. CR 08-0730 WHA, 2011 WL 2446278 (N.D. Cal. June 17, 2011).
 20 There, the court held the proposed expert testimony had “quite minimal” probative value where one of 21 the defense experts admitted that he “did not purport to address a number of issues that might be raised 22 in a criminal case, such as mental state at the time of the crime, insanity, or competence to stand trial.”
 23 Id. at *5. The expert further admitted that his testing/evaluation results were “not definitive” and “a 24 broader assessment would have been required” to examine issues like mens rea and insanity. Id. The 25 court ultimately excluded both proposed defense experts under Rule 403, finding the minimal probative
 26 value would have been outweighed by the confusion generated from extensive examination and cross-
 27 examination about vague diagnoses with little relevance to the charged conduct. Id. at *6.

19 3. Evidence Holmes Failed to Provide to Dr. Mechanic Shows She Understood the Nature and Quality of Her Actions

20 [REDACTED]

21 [REDACTED] Holmes also failed to provide Dr. Mechanic with critical evidence that Holmes knew exactly
22 what she was doing when she committed the fraud. For example, the government has produced
23 numerous videos of media interviews Holmes gave during the time of the alleged fraud. In the videos,
24

25 [REDACTED]

26 [REDACTED]

27 ⁴ This text occurred on the same day Holmes said at a Wall Street Journal conference, "We have 28 never used commercially available lab equipment for fingerstick-based tests." See <https://www.wsj.com/video/full-interview-theranos-ceo-elizabeth-holmes/B3D6EAD3-02E9-4C0C-A230-297DE5ADECF3.html>.

1 Holmes appears to understand the nature of her actions, the consequences of her mistakes, and even 2 shows remorse for Theranos's failures in lab safety.

3 For example, after The Wall Street Journal article broke on October 15, 2015, Holmes appeared
4 on CNBC Mad Money and, during a nearly ten-minute interview, defended Theranos, at one point
5 claiming falsely, "I was personally shocked to see that the Journal would publish something like this 6 when we had sent them over a thousand pages of documentation demonstrating that the statements in 7 their piece were false." (Baehr-Jones Decl., Exh. 3, available at: https://www.cnbc.com/2015/10/15/
8 theranos-ceo-fires-back-at-wsj-i-was-shocked.html.) In an interview with Maria Shriver for the Today
9 Show on April 18, 2016, Holmes accepted responsibility for the failures in lab safety and accuracy that 10 prompted the CLIA shutdown. (Baehr-Jones Decl., Exh. 4, available at: www.today.com/
11 video/theranos-ceo-elizabeth-holmes-i-m-devastated-about-blood-test-issues-668286019825.) Holmes
12 stated to Ms. Shriver, "I feel devastated that we did not catch and fix these issues faster." Ms. Shriver
13 then asked whether Holmes held herself responsible. She responded, "I'm the founder and CEO of this 14 company, anything that happens in this company is my responsibility at the end of the day."

15 These videos reveal a person adeptly answering questions and articulating justifications for the 16 fraud. This is precisely the kind of evidence that would be probative of her mental state and her intent at 17 the time of the crime. See United States v. Hiebert, 30 F.3d 1005, 1007 (8th Cir. 1994) ("A defendant's 18 attempt to conceal his commission of a crime suggests that he knows the action is wrongful, and the 19 defendant's knowledge that one crime was wrong evidences that he understood that other criminal acts
20 were inappropriate.") (citations omitted); United States v. Barton, 992 F.2d 66, 69 (5th Cir. 1993)
21 (defendant's apologies for his actions were indicative of his ability "to determine right from wrong");
22 United States v. Freeman, 804 F.2d 1574, 1577 (11th Cir. 1986) (defendant's efforts to avoid 23 apprehension demonstrated he "knew his conduct was wrongful"). Yet, Holmes showed none of these 24 videos to Dr. Mechanic. This raises important questions about the reliability of Dr. Mechanic's
25 opinions. Would her opinion change if she considered Holmes's presentation in these public media 26 appearances? In her expert opinion, is this the type of evidence that would be useful to review in 27 assessing a defendant's ability to form the intent to deceive? Again, the Court should have answers to 28 these threshold questions before deciding severance.

D. Holmes's Self-Serving Statements Are Inadmissible Under Federal Rules of Evidence 401, 402, 403, and 702

[REDACTED] the only evidence Holmes has presented in support of her Rule 12.2(b) defense are her own, self-serving statements alleging that abuse by her co-conspirator undermined her ability to commit the conspiracy.⁵ These statements, on their own, however, are inadmissible under Rules 401, 402, 403, and 702.

1. Holmes's Allegations Against Balwani Are Not Relevant Absent Expert Testimony

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] "Evidence is relevant if: (a) it has any tendency to make a fact more or less probable than it would be without the evidence; and (b) the fact is of consequence in determining the action." Fed. R. Evid. 401. "Irrelevant evidence is not admissible." Fed. R. Evid. 402.

A fact witness is not permitted to offer opinion testimony within the purview of an expert witness pursuant to Rule 702. Thus, absent Dr. Mechanic's testimony, no fact witness will be able to opine that Holmes's experience of PTSD, anxiety, and depression undermined her intent to deceive. Without this connection between Holmes's purported mental conditions and her ability to form the requisite intent, her allegations of abuse at the hands of Balwani are entirely irrelevant. These allegations are only arguably relevant—and even then, minimally so—if they tend to show that Holmes experienced IPV which triggered the mental conditions allegedly undermining her mens rea. Absent this chain of connections, which can only be explained through expert testimony, the allegations have no tie to the charged conduct or to any other defense.⁶ Indeed, one of the most arguably prejudicial allegations, [REDACTED]—on which Balwani relies to request severance—[REDACTED]

This case is therefore not like United States v. Haischer, 780 F.3d 1277 (9th Cir. 2015), on which Holmes relies. (Holmes Opp. to Gov. Admin. Mot. to Set Deadlines at 3.) There, Haischer claimed, initially as part of a duress defense and then later as part of a mens rea defense, that her co-defendant Nunes had abused her. Id. at 1280. Haischer's sister testified that she heard Nunes yelling at Haischer to sign some papers, which Haischer then testified were for the relevant fraudulent loan application. Id. Haischer's sister further testified that Nunes refused to allow Haischer to be taken to see a doctor for a badly swollen leg, which X-rays showed was badly broken, until she signed the papers. Id. The alleged abuse was therefore connected directly and factually to the fraud.

⁵ The government assumes that Holmes has submitted an ex parte proffer setting forth her potential trial testimony that includes the allegations summarized in Dr. Mechanic's declaration.

⁶ Counsel for Holmes stated at the January 13, 2020, hearing that she was not advancing a duress defense.

Here, the alleged abuse is only tied to the fraud through Dr. Mechanic's testimony. Since Dr. Mechanic's opinion—at least at this juncture—does not support the Rule 12.2(b) defense, Holmes's allegations are also inadmissible.

2. Holmes's Allegations Are Minimally Relevant Even If Expert Testimony Is Admitted and Should Therefore be Excluded Under Rule 403

Even if some form of expert testimony were admitted, however, Holmes's allegations are still only minimally relevant. The allegations of abuse are one step removed from the material issues of Holmes's mens rea defense: (1) whether she experienced PTSD, anxiety, and depression at the time of the alleged offenses; and (2) whether these mental conditions affected her ability to form the requisite intent. The allegations are also far removed from the relevant time period: [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Thus, these allegations have a tangential connection, at best, to Holmes's claims that her experience of PTSD in 2013–2016 undermined her mens rea.

Testimony about the causes of her mental condition—[REDACTED] and IPV—may be minimally relevant to evaluating Dr. Mechanic's diagnoses, but this minimal relevance is far outweighed by their potential prejudice and their likelihood to confuse and distract the jury from the material issues of the case. See Fed. R. Evid. 403; Cruz-Ramirez, 2011 WL 2446278, at *6. It is also possible that particular allegations, [REDACTED] are not relevant to the diagnoses. The Court would only be able to determine these relevancy questions by conducting a Daubert hearing, and hearing from both the defense and government experts.

E. To The Extent There Are Facts and Evidence in Dispute, the Government Requests the Court Set a Daubert Hearing

If the Court still has questions about Dr. Mechanic's potential testimony and its admissibility, the government urges the Court to hold a Daubert hearing before granting severance motion. On this record, there is a manifest need for the Court to determine the bases and reasons for Dr. Mechanic's opinion and to decide whether these opinions have a sufficient basis in analytical methodologies before making a final—and likely irreversible—decision on severance. At the very least, the case law, evidence, and arguments set forth above raise serious questions about the viability of this defense—questions which could be resolved as part of a Daubert hearing.

III. Even Assuming the Rule 12.2(b) Defense Is Admissible, Defendants Have Failed To Demonstrate That Their Defenses are Irreconcilably Antagonistic

Even if Holmes's Rule 12.2(b) defense were viable in some form—which it is not at this juncture—severance would still be unnecessary in this case because Balwani has not articulated how this defense is irreconcilably antagonistic to his own. “To warrant severance on the basis of antagonistic defenses, codefendants must show that their defenses are irreconcilable and mutually exclusive.” United States v. Angwin, 271 F.3d 786, 795 (9th Cir. 2001). Defenses are mutually exclusive when “acquittal of one codefendant would necessarily call for the conviction of the other.” United States v. Tootick, 952 F.2d 1078, 1081 (9th Cir. 1991) (emphasis added); Throckmorton, 87 F.3d at 1072 (noting that “a defendant must show that the core of the codefendant's defense is so irreconcilable with the core of his own defense that the acceptance of the codefendant's theory by the jury precludes acquittal of the defendant”). Even when defendants present antagonistic defenses, such defenses “are not prejudicial per se.” Zafiro, 506 U.S. at 538.

Holmes's defense does not require a jury to find Balwani guilty. Instead, her defense focuses entirely on whether she was capable of forming the requisite mens rea to commit the offense. Her allegations against Balwani, though unflattering to him, have no connection to the fraud and no connection to his relative guilt or innocence. In other words, Defendants can still both argue their innocence, and the jury may believe both of them and return acquittals for both. See, e.g., United States v. Shields, 673 F. App'x 625, 626–27 (9th Cir. 2016) (“Defendants' defenses were not mutually exclusive because they both argued that they were innocent, and the jury could have believed that both were acting in good faith, and acquitted them both.”). For example, both Defendants may argue that there was no scheme to defraud and the statements made to investors and patients were entirely truthful. And both Defendants may argue any false or deceptive statements were immaterial.

1 Additionally, Balwani has not yet articulated his defense and how this defense would be 2 antagonistic to Holmes's. The burden rests with Defendants to show that their defenses are 3 irreconcilably antagonistic. Throckmorton, 87 F.3d at 1072. Since they have not yet made this showing,
 4 severance would be premature. See, e.g., United States v. Son Van Nguyen, No. CR. S-99-0433 WBS,
 5 2002 WL 32103063, at *1 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 7, 2002) (holding severance based on a theory of mutually 6 antagonistic defenses was premature where both of defendants' defenses had not yet been disclosed).

7 Because it is not clear that Balwani's defense would be antagonistic to Holmes's, this case is 8 distinguishable from United States v. Breinig, 70 F.3d 850 (6th Cir. 1995). (See Balwani Mot. to Sever
 9 at 4–5; Balwani Supp. Memo. at 4.) There, Breinig claimed that “because [his wife and co-defendant]
 10 kept all the books and an accounting firm prepared their taxes, he had no knowledge of the 11 underreporting.” Id. at 852. In other words, Breinig presented a defense in which he pointed the finger 12 at his co-defendant wife and his innocence rested on her guilt. Thus, in Breinig, unlike here, the 13 defendants had met their initial burden of showing actually antagonistic defenses.⁷

14 Moreover, even if some form of the mens rea defense were admitted, it does not necessarily 15 follow that all allegations against Balwani—[REDACTED]—would also be 16 admitted. The point of Holmes's defense is not duress, i.e., Balwani's abuse forced her to commit fraud.
 17 The point of her defense is that she suffered from mental conditions that undermined her ability to form
 18 the intent to deceive. As discussed above, the causes of those mental conditions have relatively limited 19 relevance to the ultimate issues that the jury must decide: whether she suffered from the mental 20 conditions at the time of the alleged fraud and whether these conditions undermined her mens rea.
 21 Balanced against the minimal relevance of these allegations is the high likelihood that they would 22 mislead, confuse, and distract the jury. Thus, even if the Court admitted testimony from Dr. Mechanic
 23

24 ⁷ Of course, there, the Sixth Circuit reversed not merely because the defenses were antagonistic, 25 but because the testimony of Breinig's wife that he was an “adulterous, mentally abusive, and 26 manipulating spouse” was so prejudicial that it denied Breinig the right to a fair trial. Id. at 852–53.
 27 The court in Breinig, though, did not examine the content of the expert testimony in support of the 28 wife's defense and therefore never considered how these facts were relevant and admissible as part of her defense. In fact, it appears from the district court docket that the court did not conduct a Daubert hearing. See United States v. Breinig, 2:93-CR-80404 (E.D. Mich. 1993). Thus, the case is of limited value in evaluating the threshold matters here: (1) whether Holmes's Rule 12.2(b) defense is viable; and
 (2) if so, whether certain allegations would be admissible as part of the defense.

about Holmes's mental condition, the Rule 403 balancing test would still weigh heavily against admission of the "uniquely incendiary" allegations that Balwani describes.

And even if some limited testimony about the general nature of these allegations were admitted, a limiting instruction could cure any potential prejudice. See, e.g., Reay v. Scribner, 369 F. App'x 847, 848–49 (9th Cir. 2010) (holding that denial of defendant's severance motion from his wife and codefendant did not violate his due process rights where wife testified about defendant's domestic violence because, among other reasons, any prejudice was lessened by the trial court's instructions to the jury that it was to use the domestic violence evidence for proper purposes). See also Fernandez, 388 F.3d at 1241 ("[A] district court's careful and frequent limiting instructions to the jury, explaining how and against whom certain evidence may be considered, can reduce or eliminate any possibility of prejudice arising from a joint trial."); United States v. Joetzki, 952 F.2d 1090, 1094 (9th Cir. 1991) ("A defendant seeking severance based on the 'spillover' effect of evidence admitted against a co-defendant must also demonstrate the insufficiency of limiting instructions given by the judge.").

Because Holmes's Rule 12.2(b) defense is not irreconcilably antagonistic with Balwani's potential defenses, and would not necessarily result in highly prejudicial allegations being admitted at a joint trial, severance is unnecessary.

IV. "Expensive Pretrial Investigation" Is Not a Basis for Severance

Severance remedies potential prejudice at trial. "[W]hen defendants properly have been joined under Rule 8(b), a district court should grant a severance under Rule 14 only if there is a serious risk that a joint trial would compromise a specific right of one of the defendants, or prevent the jury from making a reliable judgment about guilt or innocence." Zafrio, 506 U.S. at 539. Nothing in Rule 14 contemplates severance as a remedy for a co-defendant's "expensive" pretrial investigation. Nor has Balwani cited any authority supporting such a premature application of severance.⁸

⁸ To the contrary, courts do not decide motions to sever until the record contains all relevant facts necessary to decide the issue. See, e.g., United States v. Shayota, No. 15-CR-00264-LHK, 2016 WL 2730230, at *3 (N.D. Cal. May 10, 2016) (motion for severance premature before government provided co-defendant statements it sought to admit); United States v. Piper, No. CR 08-82 RSL, 2008 WL 2230747, at *3–4 (W.D. Wash. May 29, 2008) (denying as premature motion to sever based in part on the "possibility" of mutually exclusive and antagonistic defenses). This is because severance is a remedy that imposes significant burdens on the court and the government. Zafrio, 506 U.S. at 540.

V. The Court Can Ensure a Fair Trial for Balwani by Empaneling Dual Juries

At the January 13, 2020, hearing, the Court expressed concern with delaying a decision on severance. The government recognizes this case presents unique scheduling difficulties. However, the Court need not sever the trial at this juncture. Another form of protection—empaneling dual juries—would ensure that a joint trial would not deny Balwani his right to a fair trial, even assuming all of the allegations were admitted during testimony from Dr. Mechanic and Holmes.

The procedures for empaneling dual juries are straightforward: the Court would seat a “Holmes Jury” and a “Balwani Jury.” The juries would both be present for the government’s opening statement, but only the “Holmes Jury” would be present for her opening statement, and only the “Balwani Jury” would be present for his. Similarly, only the “Holmes Jury” would be present for her affirmative defense, and for any government rebuttal case addressing her defense. During closing arguments, only the “Holmes Jury” would be present for her closing statement and for the government’s rebuttal argument in response, and likewise for Balwani’s closing statement. Although this would require some additional resources from the public and the Court, it would be much less resource-intensive than conducting two lengthy trials. It would also allow two properly joined co-conspirators to be tried together, which is what the rules and the case law support. Finally, this procedure would prevent the “Balwani Jury” from hearing any of the “uniquely incendiary” allegations of abuse that he claims could prejudice him and deny him a fair trial.

Defendants may argue that Holmes could still cross-examine government witnesses concerning her allegations of abuse. But simply asking questions about Balwani’s behavior towards Holmes would not create such prejudice that Balwani would be denied a fair trial. Moreover, defense counsel would be required to have some foundation for asking government witnesses about allegations of abuse. The government is aware of no government witness who has knowledge of the allegations that Balwani sexually and physically abused Holmes. Thus, whatever testimony might be elicited on cross-examination would not prejudice Balwani to the point that he would be unable to receive a fair trial.

The use of dual juries is widely accepted in the Ninth Circuit. Lambright, 191 F.3d at 1185 (“[D]ual juries are in wide use and . . . they have worked out just fine.”); Beam v. Paskett, 3 F.3d 1301, 1304 (9th Cir. 1993); United States v. Burnette, 698 F.2d 1038, 1042 n.2 (9th Cir. 1983); United States

1 v. Sidman, 470 F.2d 1158, 1167–70 (9th Cir. 1972). In Sidman, for instance, the Ninth Circuit approved
 2 the use of dual juries and articulated how the district court properly conducted the trial efficiently and 3 successfully protected each defendants’ due process and trial rights. 470 F.2d at 1167–68. There, the 4 district court explained the purpose of two juries where each jury would decide the guilt or innocence of 5 only one defendant, instructed each juror not to talk to each other about the case, and named one jury the 6 “Clifford jury” and the other the “Sidman jury.” One jury sat in the jury box and the other sat in chairs
 7 in front of the jury box. Counsel and the defendant would be present whenever testimony or evidence
 8 was presented in their respective case. The first verdict returned was not announced until the second one 9 was returned. The Ninth Circuit held that the dual juries used did not violate either of the defendants’
 10 trial and due process rights.⁹

11 Here, the government anticipates that all of the evidence in its case-in-chief will be admissible
 12 against both Defendants. Given that the Defendants are properly joined, using a dual-jury procedure 13 would not unduly complicate the trial process, and more importantly, would not result in any specific 14 and undue prejudice to either defendant. Severance is an extraordinary remedy for a potential defense
 15 that may not even be admitted. In this case, empaneling dual juries would provide a much less 16 disruptive and ultimately more just outcome than severance.

17 VI. Balwani Has Failed to Demonstrate Prejudice and Should Not Proceed to Trial First 18 Separate from the Court’s decision on severance is Balwani’s demand to proceed to trial first.

 19 However, he has not established that he would be unable to receive a fair trial in this district should 20 Holmes be tried first, nor has he identified the proper remedy. The Court should deny this request.

21 Balwani has no right to have the trials conducted in a particular order. See Mack v. Peters, 80
 22 F.3d 230, 235 (7th Cir. 1996) (“Severance . . . does not create a right to a particular trial sequence.”).
 23 “[C]o-conspirators should not be allowed to control the order in which they are tried.” United States v.
 24 Broussard, 80 F.3d 1025, 1038 (5th Cir. 1996). Rather, it is this Court’s “prerogative to decide the order 25 in which defendants will be tried.” Id.

26
 27 ⁹ In Sidman, the Ninth Circuit expressed some concern that the district court’s local rules did not 28 describe specific guidelines for dual juries, but Sidman was decided in 1972 when the practice was relatively novel. 470 F.2d at 1170. By 1999, in its en banc decision in Lambright, the Ninth Circuit stated that “dual juries are in wide use and . . . they have worked out just fine.” 191 F.3d at 1185.

1 “The remedy for excessive pre-trial publicity is a motion for change of venue and voir dire of 2 prospective jurors. Severance . . . is not a remedy to combat unfavorable pre-trial publicity”
 3 United States v. Thevis, 474 F. Supp. 117, 132 (N.D. Ga. 1979) (footnote omitted); see also United 4 States v. Noriega, 746 F. Supp. 1548, 1556 (S.D. Fla. 1990) (rejecting pretrial publicity as a basis for 5 severance and stating “[i]f . . . careful voir dire is not enough to limit the prejudice flowing from pretrial
 6 publicity, then the answer lies in locating a venue in which all the defendants receive a fair trial”).

7 Just as pretrial publicity is not a basis for severance, it is not a basis to order the trials. Even if it
 8 were, Balwani’s claim that Holmes’s defense will incurably taint the jury pool (and thus he must go
 9 first) is speculation. The sole evidentiary support for this claim is his counsel’s count of 150 stories
 10 since October 2015, when John Carreyrou’s article first ran in The Wall Street Journal, additional 11 national media attention, and unsworn, unverified news articles about #MeToo.

12 The Ninth Circuit, however, has “made clear that ‘pervasive publicity, without more, does not 13 automatically result in an unfair trial.’” United States v. Guerrero, 693 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012)
 14 (quoting Seattle Times Co. v. U.S. Dist. Court, 845 F.2d 1513, 1517 (9th Cir. 1988)); see also In re
 15 Tsarnaev, 780 F.3d 14, 15 (1st Cir. 2015) (“[A]ny high-profile case will receive significant media
 16 attention. . . . Knowledge, however, does not equate to disqualifying prejudice.”). Balwani does nothing
 17 to demonstrate the nature of the coverage. Cf. Guerrero, 693 F.3d at 1002 (“In assessing prejudicial 18 effect, we look to the publicity’s capacity to inflame and prejudice the entire community.” (quotations
 19 omitted)). He does not show the extent to which potential venire members noted the news coverage,
 20 recall it today, and have developed negative views about Theranos, Holmes, or himself. He presents no
 21 polling data or expert testimony. Cf. Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358, 369-370 (2010) (affirming 22 denial of change of venue in Enron criminal case despite “affidavits from . . . experts [Skilling] engaged 23 portraying community attitudes in Houston”). He overlooks the fact that San Jose is “a large, diverse 24 metropolitan area” whose “residents obtain their news from a vast array of sources.” Tsarnaev, 780
 25 F.3d at 21; see also Skilling, 561 U.S. at 382 (noting Houston’s large, diverse pool of potential jurors);
 26 <https://www.justice.gov/usao-ndca> (noting more than 9 million people reside in Northern District of 27 California). He gives no evidence—beyond unsworn news articles and citation to an unsworn social 28 science article—to support the claim that traditional tools like voir dire and, if necessary, change of venue will protect against the prejudice he simply assumes. See Skilling, 561 U.S. at 395 (noting the district court's "face-to-face opportunity to gauge demeanor and credibility, coupled with information from the questionnaires regarding jurors' backgrounds, opinions, and sources of news, gave the court a sturdy foundation to assess fitness for jury service"). In sum, "it would be premature and speculative to conclude at this point, without the benefit of a voir dire examination of prospective jurors, that the publicity surrounding [the defendant] is so prejudicial and widespread that a fair and impartial jury cannot be seated in this case." Noriega, 746 F. Supp. at 1556. Balwani's evidence falls far short of showing that current publicity, or any that would result from disclosure of Holmes's defense, will incurably taint the jury pool.¹⁰

If the Court elects to sever the case, Holmes must be tried first. Holmes, quite literally, was the face of Theranos. She was its only CEO, she chaired its board, and she held the greatest equity stake in the company. Her persona, not Balwani's, generated interest from investors, partners, and the media. Delaying her trial for an indefinite time after Balwani's will unjustly frustrate the victim's and the public's interest in adjudicating the allegations of the indictment against the most responsible party.

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, the Court should deny severance. If severance is granted, Holmes should be tried first.

¹⁰ For the reasons previously stated, the Court should unseal the filings relating to the Rule 12.2(b) defense and the motions to sever, or at a minimum require Defendants to file redacted versions that redact only matters [REDACTED] with prostitutes and insisted she watch. Approximately 125 of the 312 filings in this case (40%) are now sealed. The victims and the public have a right to know what is happening in this proceeding and why.

GOV. OPP. TO BALWANI MOT. TO SEVER

Declaration of Renée Binder, M.D.

I, Renée Binder, declare and state as follows:

1. I am a physician who has been licensed to practice in the State of California since 1974. I am board certified in General Psychiatry since 1978 and in the subspecialty of Forensic Psychiatry since 1994. I have treated thousands of patients with depression, anxiety, posttraumatic stress disorder, and women who have suffered from interpersonal abuse and interpersonal violence.
2. I have done forensic evaluations since 1980. I have served as President of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law as well as President of the American Psychiatric Association and served as interim Chair of the Department of Psychiatry and the Director of the Langley Porter Psychiatric Hospital and Clinics at the University of California San Francisco School of Medicine from 2008 to 2011. A copy of my C.V. is attached.
3. I was asked to review the declaration of Mindy Mechanic, PhD, as well as the documents given to me by the Office of the U.S. Attorney, as detailed in Appendix A. [REDACTED]

Interpersonal Abuse and Interpersonal Violence Definitions

8. Interpersonal abuse refers to abusive relationships in which the abuse is physical, psychological, and/or sexually coercive and may include stalking. In such abusive relationships, the aggressor uses manipulative tactics and tries to exert control over the other person. Resistance or challenge can be met with an escalation of abuse. Attempts to

Posttraumatic Stress Disorder Diagnosis

14. Posttraumatic Stress Disorder can occur after exposure to actual or threatened death, serious injury, [REDACTED] Symptoms include intrusion symptoms such as recurring, involuntary and intrusive distressing memories of the event, recurrent nightmares, intense or prolonged psychological distress and/or marked physiological reactions to reminders of the trauma. Symptoms also include avoidance symptoms where a person avoids memories and external reminders of the trauma. In addition, there can be the inability to remember aspects of the traumatic event not related to having been intoxicated with alcohol [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] negative cognitions about oneself, feelings of detachment from others and persistent inability to experience positive emotions. Other symptoms include feelings of arousal such as irritable behavior, hypervigilance and exaggerated startle responses. In order to make the diagnosis, there needs to be clinically significant distress or impairment in social, occupational, or other important areas of functioning. (DSM-5, 2013, pages 271–72.)

15. Although trauma is relatively ubiquitous, the projected lifetime risk for PTSD is 8.7%. The 12 month prevalence among US adults is 3.5%. That is, most people who suffer from trauma do not develop PTSD. In addition, there is a phenomenon of False PTSD, especially in the context of criminal evaluations when defendants may malingering their symptoms and there is also the phenomenon of misattributing symptoms due to other causes as PTSD. (Matto, McNiel, Binder, “A Systematic Approach to the Detection of False PTSD,” Journal of American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law. August 2019.)
